

2019 – New Media

Gabrielle Gonzalez: I chose New Media as a class because I want to go into the film business; I want to make movies and direct for my career. My favorite thing about New Media is pretty much the programs that we use on the computers. I like learning about new things and stuff like that. We use Photoshop, we use Premiere Pro, we use Adobe After Effects. We really focus on the four different aspects of art: in digital art, graphic design, photography, audio, and film. In the end, we work together, and put all of those together for our thesis project. We have access to cameras, Nikon and Canon cameras. We have a photography studio and a sound studio, each equipped with all the good equipment you need, and then the computers that we use, we each get our own individual computers, all personal computers. New Media is typically a one-year program, but there is a second year. I'm coming back for the second year; it's more of like a focus year. So, since I'm going into mostly film and photography, that's what I will be focusing on. We will be using all the stuff we learned in the first year, just to focus on that one particular thing, and just do projects surrounding that. We will be going to work-based learning sites, which are sites that we will visit, and see What it's like to work in the industry that we want to go into.
